How to make the innovation process more stimulating and playful? How to represent your challenge in a tangible and manipulated form? How can you imagine new offers for your organisation or new trajectories for yourself? What if, instead of writing down your ideas, you put them into game? This book proposes an original and operational method to gamify the innovation process, to promote the teams' involvement and to bring out many feasible, original or even disruptive ideas. The method will allow you to generate ideas based on 6 dimensions –one dimension for each side of the cube– representing the essential components of your new product or service offer: • Users: For which types of customers (people or organisations) do you create the product or service? • Places: Where will you deliver your offer? What type of space is most suitable to use it? • Resources: What are your key resources to build your offer? • Game changers: What scenarios could change or differentiate your offer? • Advantages: What is the advantage that your product or service provides to the user? • Revenue stream: How will you make your business model sustainable? Bringing together gaming, creativity and storytelling, the Cubification Method has already been used by thousands of people: Engie, Suez, BnF, Maped, Capgemini, Somfy, etc. Used in personal development, entrepreneurship, business development or training, the method has been tested on extremely varied playgrounds: incubators, universities, small and major enterprises, as well as large international organisations and NGOs. Playful and richly illustrated, the book sets out the principles of the method and many tips to apply it. The real cases –The Playgrounds– proposed at the end of the book are a source of inspiration and make the best practices accessible to all. With this book, you will identify the mechanisms of the game that promote creativity and learn, step by step, to set up the Cubification Method in the context that interests you.

Why Mummy Drinks is the brilliant novel from Gill Sims, the author of the online sensation Peter and Jane. Boy Child Peter, Girl Child Jane and Daddy have exciting adventures with Mummy. Daddy likes gadgets. Peter and Jane like starting fires, trying to kill each other and driving Mummy to drink. Written from the point of view of an exhausted mummy at the end of the day, it's honest, it's funny, and it's a little bit swearsy. It is Mummy's 39th birthday. She is staring down the barrel at a future of people asking if she wants to come to their yoga class, and book clubs, where everyone is wearing statement scarves and they are all 'tiddly' after a glass of Pinot Grigio. But Mummy does not want to go quietly into that good night of women with sensible haircuts who 'live for their children', boasting about Boy Child and Girl Child's achievements. Instead, she clutches a large glass of wine, muttering FML over and over, and then remembers the gem of an
