The 1982 NBC series was put on the list of TV Guide 's 50 Worst TV Shows of All Time, ranked at #22. The show revolved around a seemingly normal teenage boy who was actually an alien prince with superpowers. The first half of the series showed him as a high school student where his guardian, also an alien, worked as a science teacher.

of production, and everything in between. Creating Reality is an ideal resource for media students, reality TV fans and current producers who want to brush up on their craft.

The origins of, and in many ways the prototype for, modern reality programming can be traced to Real People, a show which focused on average individuals, primarily Americans, and applauded their individuality. This book provides an examination of Real People, why it succeeded, and what implications it had for future television programming.

Nearly every night on every major network, “ unscripted ” (but carefully crafted) “ reality ” TV shows routinely glorify retrograde stereotypes that most people would assume got left behind 35 years ago. In Reality Bites Back, media critic Jennifer L. Pozner aims a critical, analytical lens at a trend most people dismiss as harmless fluff. She deconstructs reality TV 's twisted fairytales to demonstrate that far from being simple " guilty pleasures, " these programs are actually guilty of fomenting gender-war ideology and significantly affecting the intellectual and political development of this generation 's young viewers. She lays out the cultural biases promoted by reality TV about gender, race, class, sexuality, and consumerism, and explores how those biases shape and reflect our cultural perceptions of who we are, what we ' re valued for, and what we should view as " our place " in society. Smart and informative, Reality Bites Back arms readers with the tools they need to understand and challenge the stereotypes reality TV reinforces and, ultimately, to demand
